Welcome Note

Premier Frozen Foods have over thirty years experience in the food services sector. We are constantly reviewing our product range and sourcing new and exciting products for both the retail and food services sector. It is our hope that our increased variety can help you to expand your deli and food offering and should you have a product in mind that you wish to offer, we are always happy to source these products for our customers.

Based outside Tullamore we deliver across the midlands and the greater Leinster region, we work only with reputable food suppliers so that you can have confidence in the food you supply to your customers.

Offering you quality products from reputable suppliers at excellent costs, we guarantee you a reliable and friendly service operating to the highest standards. Premier Frozen Foods is fully HACCP compliant.

Service Details

We consider the most important element of our business to be service, and being family run we are positioned to offer a service that is considered second to none. Customers benefit from a tightly coordinated team approach offering structured procedures for stock control combined with a flexible and facilitating approach to goods outwards and inwards.

Our poultry suppliers are licensed by the Department of Agriculture and hold their own EU plant number - a standard which is only achieved by the implementation and maintenance of the highest standards of operation.

HACCP Guidelines

Principles of HACCP

There are seven principles of HACCP. A food safety management system based on these seven principles will enable hazards to be identified and controlled before they threaten the safety of your food and the health of your customers.

1. Identify the hazards

Look at each step (e.g. purchasing, delivery, storage, preparation, cooking, chilling etc.) in your operation and identify what can go wrong e.g. Salmonella in a cooked chicken product due to cross contamination with raw meat (biological hazard), contamination of uncovered food with detergent (chemical hazard) or a piece of broken glass falling into uncovered food (physical hazard).

2. Determine the critical control points (CCPs)

Once hazards have been identified you must ensure that they are adequately controlled. In general, the majority of hazards are controlled by ensuring that you are operating an effective prerequisite programme, i.e. good hygiene practices (see Section 3). A Critical Control Point (commonly referred to as 'CCP') is a step in food processing where a control procedure must be applied to prevent a food safety hazard occurring or reduce it to a safe level. It is the last chance to control a hazard before the food is sold. For example, cooking beef burgers to a minimum core temperature of 70°C for 2 minutes or equivalent (e.g. 75°C instantaneously) will kill E. coli O157 and other pathogens.

3. Establish critical limit(s)

Set limits to enable you to identify when a CCP is out of control e.g. the temperature at the centre of a beef burger following cooking must reach a minimum 70°C for 2 minutes, or equivalent (e.g. 75°C instantaneously).

4. Establish a system to monitor control of the CCP

It is important to have a way to monitor and record what is happening at each CCP. Typically, monitoring will involve measuring parameters such as temperature and time.

5. Establish corrective action

When monitoring indicates that a CCP is not under control, corrective action must be taken.

6. Establish Verification Procedures

These should be used to confirm the HACCP system is working effectively. Review and correct the system periodically and whenever you make changes to your operation

7. Maintain documentation

Documentation should be kept and be readily available concerning all procedures and records appropriate to these principles and their application e.g. cooking temperatures, delivery or cleaning records. It is unrealistic to operate HACCP or to demonstrate compliance with the current legislation without providing evidence such as written records.
